Principles of Effective College Teaching is an intensive Magna Online Course that provides in-depth instruction on the myriad responsibilities of a college teacher. You'll find it an indispensable resource as you prepare to teach.

Presented by James M. Lang, PhD, professor of English and director of the Center for Teaching Excellence at Assumption College, Principles of Effective College Teaching is grounded in research-based best practices and introduces you to fundamental principles of human learning that will guide you as you create and teach your courses. From there, Lang will explain in detail how you can:

- Craft meaningful learning objectives using Bloom's Taxonomy
- Manage course content efficiently
- Create assignments that support course objectives
- Develop assessment plans and design exams
- Provide effective feedback and evaluations
- Enhance learning outcomes through the use of technology and new media
- Apply active learning strategies
- Keep your students motivated and engaged
- Facilitate peer-to-peer learning
- Manage difficult issues like academic dishonesty and distracted students
